INTERACTIVE WORKSHOP
FOR DEVELOPING NEW HACCP IMPLEMENTATION AGENCIES AND CERTIFICATION AGENCIES RECOGNIZED BY APEDA

1. INTRODUCTION:

With an expanding world economy, liberalization of food trade, growing customer demand, developments in food science and technology and improvements in transport and communication, international trade in fresh and processed food will continue to increase.

Access of countries, to food export markets will continue to depend on their capacity to meet the regulatory requirements of exporting countries, creating and sustaining demand for their food products in world markets relies on building the trust and confidence of importers and consumers in the integrity of their food system. Agriculture production being the focal point of the economies of most developing countries, food protection measures is essential.

Apart from food laws and regulations, inspections, monitoring and testing a risk based preventive approach is required because it is impossible to provide adequate protection to the consumer merely by sampling and analyzing the final product. The introduction of preventive measures at all stages of the food production and distribution chain rather than only inspection and rejection at the final stage makes better economic sense because unsuitable product can be identified earlier along the chain. Expectations of importing countries are increasing as the EU food safety strategy covers not just safe food but also animal health & animal welfare and plant health. The strategy ensures that the food is traceable as it moves from farm through table even if it crosses national and international boundaries. As per WHO food safety program global key food safety concerns include:

- Spread of microbiological hazards including such bacteria as Salmonella or E.Coli
- Chemical Food contaminants
- Assessment of new food technologies such as genetically modified food.
- Strong food safety system in most countries to ensure a safe global food chain.
- Unsafe food causes many acute and life long diseases, ranging from diarrhea diseases taken together kill about 2.2 million people annually, 1.9 million of them are children.

In view of the above facts, to strengthen the food safety in Indian export market APEDA is planning to have some more HACCP certification and Implementation agencies in its panel. Criteria for selection of implementation agencies is given as under where as criteria for recognition of certification agencies is given in APEDA website under the head “Quality”
