FOREWORD

The extraordinary effort of Government of India resulted in the announcement of year 2023 as International Year of Millets and is a pivot move with the effect in bringing down emissions and health budget of homes. Our Honorable Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi well emphasized the rich nutritional and cultural value of this smart food – the Indian Millets. In his 92nd Mann Ki Baat on Sunday 28th, August 2022, he could be heard quoting, "India is the largest producer of Millets in the world, so the responsibility of making this initiative a success also rests on the shoulders of the people of India. Together we all have to make it a mass movement, and also increase awareness of millets among the people of the country."

Withstanding capacity in terms of extreme climates and potential of multiple harvests, millet is the natural insurance for the farmer with the protection of higher income and hedge for global food security. The wave of colonialism brought the new culture of food, beverage and textile or altered local culture in various countries. The need of increased calories and new consumer trends in the industrial era waned the consumption of millets and took away local food culture from our food plates during last two centuries. The Industrial Revolution 4.0 has redefined the life style and 'need of food calories'. The millet is a smart food with climate compliant, nutrition security and true food of human civilisation.

The high protein content of millets make them ideal breakfast food for vegetarian and vegan population. The urbanization of society has resulted into the prominence of millets in the modern diet. The unique selling proposition of millets in the export markets emerge from its character of gluten free nature, nutraceutical and dietary food for specific medical purposes through processed food. The resurrection of 'Bharatiya Food Export' in global market through millet is a reality.

APEDA, being the apex export promotion vehicle of India, is dutiful - 'Path of Kartavya' - to propagate millets in global scale. An E-Catalogue of millet value chain by APEDA is the first step towards introducing our products to global market. The purpose of this E-catalogue is to create 'credible open source' information on material and market in terms of value chain to the Farmers, FPOs, Traders, Exporters and Importers.

I am thankful to my team APEDA, who worked hard to realize my instinct and idea of this E-catalogue's creation.

SAUDI ARABIA

The Kingdom of Saudi Arabia lies at the furthest part of southwestern Asia. It is bordered by the Arabian Gulf, United Arab Emirates and Qatar in the east; Red Sea in the west; Kuwait, Iraq and Jordan in the north; Yemen and Oman in the south.

It occupies about four-fifths of the Arab Peninsula, with a total area of around 27,163,977 square kilometers. Because of its large area, the Kingdom has a diverse topography. The major cities of Saudi Arabia are Riyadh (capital of Saudi Arabia) Figure: Official Map of Saudi Arabia

India and Saudi Arabia also enjoy cordial and friendly relations reflecting the centuries old economic and socio-cultural ties. The establishment of diplomatic relations in 1947 was followed by high-level visits from both sides and the gesture is still being followed by the leaders of both countries.

Trade Relations with India:

On the economic front, Saudi Arabia is one of the fastest emerging markets and developing economies of the world with a projected growth rate of 7.6% during the year 2022 (World Economic Outlook Report, 2022). Along with that, it is also India's fourth largest trading partner and a major source of energy as India imports around 18% of its crude oil requirement and ~22% of its LPG requirement from the Kingdom. In FY 2021-22, bilateral trade was valued at US $42.8 billion. During this period, India's imports from Saudi Arabia reached US $34.01 billion and exports to Saudi Arabia were worth US$ 8.76 billion registering an increase of 49.5% over last year. Total trade with Saudi Arabia accounted for 4.14% of India's total trade in FY 2021-22.

VARIETIES OF MILLETS IMPORTED

INTRODUCTION – MILLETS

Millet represents a crucial staple grain for poor farmers in the drier, hotter parts of the developing world, especially in Africa and Asia. Around the world, millets (pearl millet and lesser millets) are grown in more than 93 different nations. The most common millet is sorghum, which is farmed on 42.1 million hectares in 105 nations. Developing nations primarily in Africa and Asia produce and consume 97% of the world's millets. India is the greatest millet producer in the world, with 26.6% of the world's millet growing area and 83% of Asia's millet cropping area.

In India, millets play an important role in the rainfed region which contributes to 60% of the total area. The small millets are a rich source of nutrients and minerals and resistant to drought and stress in rainfed farming. Millets are adapted to a wide range of ecological conditions and are often grown on skeletal soils that are less than 15cm deep. It does not demand rich soils for their survival and growth. In India, millets have been an integral part of tribal food in the States of Odisha, Madhya Pradesh, Jharkhand, Rajasthan, Karnataka, and Uttarakhand and are majorly grown in Rajasthan, Uttar Pradesh, Gujarat, Madhya Pradesh, Haryana, Maharashtra and Karnataka.

BENEFITS OF MILLETS

- Millets are capable of surviving the extreme climate and degraded soil. In comparison to most fine cereals, they have minimal obligation of water, fertilizers, and pesticides.

- Nutrient-dense: Compared to maize, refined wheat flour, and polished rice, they contain lots of nutrients.
- Value-added products are ready to cook, ready to eat, and accessible to the urban population.
- Where refined grains such as refined rice are shown to be associated with non-communicable diseases, such as diabetes mellitus type 2 and obesity. On the other hand, millets have a low Glycaemic Index (GI) and also have a strong association with the prevention of diabetes.
- They are high in mineral content, i.e., iron, zinc, and calcium.
- Millets are naturally gluten-free and hence consumed by celiac disease patients. Many types of millet such as corn, sorghum, and amaranth are consumed by most people as an alternative to cereal.
- Strong associations have been made with the reduction of weight, BMI, and high blood pressure. Millet has a beneficial effect on the management and prevention of hyperlipidemia and also changes the blood profile to improve the overall health status and risk of Cardiovascular diseases (CVD).
- Millet is generally consumed with legumes in India, which causes mutual supplementation of protein, increases the amino acid content and enhances the overall digestibility of protein.
- Millet is used for dual purposes as food as well as fodder. In this way, it contributes to national food security and also maintains farming efficiency.
- Wheat and paddy are thermally sensitive crops and contribute to climate change. On the contrary, millets reduce the carbon footprint.

2. INDIAN VARIETIES OF MILLETS

2.1 PEARL MILLETS (BAJRA)

The most extensively cultivated millet is pearl millet (Pennisetum glaucum, P. typhoides, P.typhipideum, and P. americanum). Large stems, leaves, and heads characterise this summer cereal grass. In terms of farmed land and contributions to food security in parts of Africa and Asia that can only produce limited amounts of other crops, pearl millet is the most significant species of millet. Compared to other millet such as sorghum or maize, it utilizes moisture more effectively. Condensed panicles (spiked) measuring 10 to 150 cm in length, support the grain. Under conditions of heat and drought, pearl millet has the highest yield potential of all millets. Pearl millet can be beneficial in the process of weight loss as it is high in fiber content and also give satiety as it takes a longer time to pass through the stomach to the intestine. It has been found that due to its high fibre content risk of occurrence of gall stone is low. Pearl millet had phosphorus and a rich source of calcium which helps to attain peak bone density

2.2 SORGHUM (JOWAR)

Sorghum is a crop from the Gramineae family that is high in carbohydrates and has the scientific name Sorghum bicolor L. It is one of the staple crops for millions of semi-arid residents, it is also known as the "KING OF MILLETS". Its main ingredient is starch, which is digested more slowly than in other cereals and also has low protein and fat digestibility. The onset of non-communicable diseases is significantly influenced by oxidative stress and excessive free radical production. The expression of the phase II enzyme is controlled by sorghum-derived phenolic chemicals. These operate as the body's natural defense against oxidative stress by converting highly reactive electrophilic species (RES) into harmless and excretable metabolites. The most extensively cultivated millet is pearl millet (Pennisetum glaucum, P. typhoides, P.typhipideum, and P. americanum). Large stems, leaves, and heads characterise this summer cereal grass. 2.3 FINGER MILLETS (RAGI)

Another significant staple grain in Eastern Africa and Asia is finger millet (Eleusine coracana), often known as ragi in India (India, Nepal). At the top of the stem, the plant has many spikes or "fingers." The grains are tiny (1-2 mm in diameter). Finger millet grains are rich in minerals, dietary fibre, polyphenols, and proteins. Finger millet, which is rich in calcium plays an important role in growing children, pregnant women as well as people suffering from obesity, diabetes and malnutrition. It contains high amount of potassium for the proper functioning of the kidneys and brains and allows the brain and muscles to work smoothly.

2.4 SMALL MILLETS

A. FOXTAIL MILLET(VARAGU)

Foxtail millet (Setaria italica L.) an annual grass plant, produces seeds that possess health-promoting properties owing to its unique protein composition containing a high content of essential amino acids. It is one of the earliest cultivated crops, extensively grown in the arid and semi-arid regions of Asia and Africa, as well as in some other economically developed countries of the world where it is more commonly used as bird feed. Antinutrients like phytic acid and tannin present in this millet can be reduced to undetectable amounts by using the proper processing methods. Additionally, the millet is said to have antioxidant, low-glycemic index, and hypolipidemic properties.

B. BARNYARD MILLET

Barnyard millet (Echinochloa crusgalli, E. colona), is a short duration crop that can grow in adverse environmental conditions with almost no input and can withstand various biotic and abiotic stresses. In addition to these agronomic advantages, the grains are valued for their high nutritional value and lower expense as compared to major cereals like rice, wheat, and maize. It contains a rich source of protein, carbohydrates, fiber, and, most notably, micronutrients like iron (Fe) and zinc (Zn) that are related to numerous health benefits. All these features make barnyard millet an ideal supplementary crop for subsistence farmers and also as an alternate crop during the failure of monsoons in rice/major crop cultivating areas.

C. KODO MILLET

In India, Kodo millet (Paspalum scrobiculatum) grown mostly in the Deccan region and the cultivation extends to the foothills of Himalayas. Kodo millet is rich in dietary fiber and minerals like iron, antioxidant. The phosphorus content in kodo millet is lower than any other millet and its antioxidant potential is much higher than any other millet and major cereals, higher amount of antioxidants helps against oxidative stress and maintain glucose concentrations in type-2 diabetes. Kodo millet is useful in curing asthma, migraine, blood pressure, heart attack and atherosclerosis, diabetic heart disease and for postmenopausal in females.

D. PROSO MILLET

Proso-millet (Panicum miliaceum L.) is an underutilized crop which is highly nutritious cereal grain used for human consumption, bird seed, and/or ethanol production. Grains of proso millet are a rich source of vitamins (niacin, B-complex vitamins, folic acid), minerals (P, Ca, Zn, Fe) and essential amino acids (methionine and cysteine), starch, and phenolic compounds like antioxidants and betaglucans. Seeds also contain components with healing benefits, which decrease the level of low-density lipoprotein cholesterol in blood and injury to the liver and high lecithin content which supports the neural health system

E. LITTLE MILLET

Little Millet (Panicum miliare) is one among the minor millets grown to a limited extent all over India up to altitudes of 2100 m. It is a relative of proso millet but the seeds of little millet are much smaller than proso millet, with their low carbohydrate content, slow digestibility and low water-soluble gum content. The complex carbohydrates, phenolic compounds, antioxidant content present in them helps to prevent metabolic disorders like diabetes, cancer, obesity etc.

3. MILLET PRODUCTION SCENARIO

3.1 MILLETS PRODUCTION OF INDIA

India is the largest producer of millets followed by Sudan and Nigeria. Millet production is concentrated mainly in dry and arid regions where rainfall is low and erratic. In India, millets are mostly cultivated in Karnataka, Andhra Pradesh, Tamil Nadu, Maharashtra, Odisha, Madhya Pradesh, Rajasthan and Uttarakhand states. Rajasthan (87 % of Bajra area), Maharashtra (75 % of sorghum area) and Karnataka (54 % of Ragi and 32 % of Bajra) occupy maximum area of millets (Stanly and Shanmugan, 2013). Now a days, the productivity of millets is boosting through technologies and high yielding varieties.

3.2 MILLETS PRODUCTION OF WORLD

Developing countries produce and consume around 97% of the world's millets and only a small fraction comes from the rest of the world. The average data of millet production of different continents indicated that Asia is the largest producer of millets (13.2 Mt) followed by Africa (6.9 Mt), Europe (2.3 Mt), America (0.32 Mt), and Oceania (0.03 Mt). In Asia, millet production concentrates mainly in India, China, and Nepal. With 37.5% of global output, India is the largest producer of millets followed by Sudan and Nigeria. In India, millet production is concentrated mainly in dry and arid regions where rainfall is low and erratic. The most widely produced millet is pearl millet, which is mainly grown in the states of Rajasthan, Uttar Pradesh, Gujarat, Madhya Pradesh, and Haryana which accounts for 56% (9 Mt) of total millets production in India.

Africa contributes to a major share in global millets production because millets are an important staple food in larger part of the continent. The major millet producing African countries are Niger, Nigeria, Sudan, Mali, Ethiopia, Senegal, Burkina Faso etc. In America, the United States is the major North American millet producing country whereas in South America it is dominated by Argentina. Millets production in Europe is concentrated in the drier regions of Eastern Europe and shares 90% of the region.

5. INDIA'S EXPORT OF MILLETS

India is among the top 5 exporters of millets in world. World export of millet has increased from $400 million in 2020 to $470 million in 2021. (source: ITC trade map) India exported millets worth $64.28 million in the year 2021-22, against $59.75 million in 2020-21. Share of Millet based value added products is negligible.
